DELEGATES IN ATTENDANCE

Promotion of American Merchant Marine One of Its Objects.

CHAIRMAN DE LIMA PRESIDES

Representatives of the District of Columbia - Opening Address Outlining Program of Meeting.

The national convention for the extension of the foreign commerce of the United States, which was called by the New York board of trade and transportation, convened in the New Willard today for a three days' session. The convention was called to order by E. S. A. De Lima of New York, chairman of the organization committee, and James W. Van Cleve of St. Louis, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, acted as temporary chairman. The object of the organization is to promote the American merchant main foreign countries. More than one thousand delegates have been named by governors of the states and by constituent organizations, and a great majority of these are in attendance. Several hundred delegates arrived yesterday and this morning, and a great many more are expected during the day. Among those who will address the convention are Secre-tary of State Root, Secretary of Commerce and Labor Straus, John W. Foster, former Secretary of State; Francis B. Loomis, for-mer assistant secretary of state; Seth Low, former mayor of New York city; Dr. Jacob G. Schurman, president of Cornell Univer-sity, and W. R. Buchanan, former minister

R. Boutwell and J. W. Brown, appointed by the Board of Trade and Business Men's Association of Norfolk.

The invocation was pronounced by Rev. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. Edward Everett Hale, chaplain of the United States Senate, and immediately afterward Mr. E. S. A. De Lima, chairman of the committee for organization, made the opening address, outlining the programand scope of the convention.

and scope of the convention. Address by Mr. De Lima.

Mr. De Lima said in part: "This body was called together by the New York board of trade and transportation for the purpose of considering and devising measures for the enlargement of our foreign trade, and to promote the demand abroad for the products of our farms, workshops and mines. In issuing that call we had in mind the thought which was so forcibly expressed by that great ley, who realized the vital importance to thic country of broadening our markets, and spoke of it in his memorable last address to his fellow-countrymen.

"The policy which President McKinley advocated is all the more imperative today because of our greatly increased commer-cial and industrial and agricultural productiveness. The annual and financial commercial review of the United States is an inspiring record of prodigious under-takings, yielding stupendous results. Stand-ards unparalleled in commercial history have been established. We read of grain exceeding $2,000,000,000 in value garnered from our farms during 1906; of 11,346,000 bales of cotton ginned; of live stock estimated at $320,000,000 in our yards; of minerals and metals worth $2,000,000,000 exerais and metals worth $2,000,000,000 ex-tracted from our mines; of 400,000,000 tons of coal, the product of our lands; of 682,-428,530 pounds of tobacco and of 57,145,959 tons of hay gathered from our fields; of $3,000,000,000 worth of food products; of $183,000,000, the product of dairies, and of 145,000,000 barrels of petroleum extracted from our wells. The number of farms in excellent state of cultivation in the United States is estimated at 6,000,000,000, a number unequaled in any other country. Our national wealth is computed to be $100,- Foreign Countries. "Where attempts have been made to in troduce American manufactures into foreign countries, the methods adopted have foreign peoples, to their tastes or to conditions prevailing among them. Letters are written in English and prices given in dollars and cents, as if these were the universal language and standard of values; scant notice is taken of customs' regulations or of the means of transportation in the country to which goods are shipped. It not infrequently happens that not only is the wrong article sent, but the goods are carelessly prepared for shipment in packages of extraordinary and unnecessary size for countries where customs' duties are levied on the gross weight of the packages, and where transporation to the interior must be made on the backs of animals. The

him the greatest amount of the attention which he devotes to loreign trade; yet our sales to Europe do not average over $3 per capita annually.

"While the American merchant has been absorbed in the development of domestic industries and his energies have been di-rected chiefly to ministering to the remander industries and his energies have been di-rected chiefly to ministering to the remands of internal trade; while every section of this country has been enjoying an unparal-leted prosperity, owing to and dependent almost wholly upon our own resources and consumption, the hations of Europe have been making foreign commerce a study little short of scientific and have been judi-ciously strengthening themselves in the inlittle short of scientific and have been judi-ciously strengthening themselves in the in-terests of that trade. Their men are well trained and experienced in dealing with other people; their steamship service is fully adequate and effectively responsive at all points to the demands made upon it; their consular representatives are able and effi-cient and their banking facilities an invalu-able auxiliary to their industrial and com-mercial interests concerned in securing a large share of the world's trade. England, France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bellarge share of the world's trade. England, France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Italy and Spain have realized that the commerce of a country cannot be studied in a short time, but that a more or less lengthy sojourn among the people thereof is indispensable to the establishment of profitable business relations with them. They send out their young men to the countries with which they will trade, there to dwell a sufficient time to learn the language, form friendships, study the resources and wants of the people that they may satisfy them; and finally, they adjust their scheme of credit and collection to the their scheme of credit and collection to the conditions of the country. With South and Orient.

"Let us consider our trade with the countries to the south of us and with the orient. We supply barely 18 per cent of the estimated importations of the Latin-American countries, Europe furnishing the other 87 per cent, consisting almost entirely of manufactures, while of our 13 per cent a large proportion is foodstuffs. Surely our tariff is not entirely at fault. But it is not intended to open, but rather to close, the doors to tariff discussions in this convention. As was stated in the call, the committee feels that whatever means are adopted, in order to be immediately effective, must be based on a recognition of economic conditions as they now exist in this country. All discussions should, therefore, be germane to the object in view, which is that of securing prompt and practical results. This convention should inaugurate an organized and rine, international arbitration, plan for repost, reciprocity, consular reform and the effective effort to awaken the business men of the United States to a realization of the vital importance to this country of carefully fostering our foreign trade, because of its great possibilities for an enlarged com-mercial activity and as a safeguard during the years of business depression at home. Every organization represented in this body should become a center from which to disseminate information on this subject. "One of the questions demanding our most careful thought is that of reciprocal trade arrangements. "The appointment of a committee of well-trained, experienced business men to negotiate treaties, which, while amply protecting American industries, will grant us greater privileges in other countries, would undoubtedly prove to be largely beneficial to our people. With several of our other southern neighbors we had arrangements some years ago which also enhanced our trade with them. The conditions for a renewal of reciprocal treaties are especially favorable today in view of the very cordial relations established by Secretary of State Root in his recent visit to South America.

Great Britain in Lead.

"With Great Britain in the lead, all the peoples of the old world have been steadily fostering and increasing their commercial relations abroad and strengthening their defenses at home. The Uited States claiming, and justly so, to be one of the most enlightened, enterprising and liberal nations of the world, stands prominently forward as a single exception which has allowed its shipyards to decay and its flag to disappear from the seas. While these countries have acquired the carrying trade of the world and have diverted the commerce of United States Export Association, National Association of Clothiers, National Association of Clothiers, National Association of Clothiers and Vehicle fest advantage of their farmers and merour imports and exports in our own ships Almost 90 per cent of our foreign trade is carried in foreign ships at an estimated cost of $200,000,000, paid annually to other countries, that they may do a work for which no people is better fitted than our own. The re-establishment of our former supremacy as a maritime people is one of the most important questions now the most important questions now demand-ing solution at the hands of American statesmanship. Let us, therefore, impress upon our representatives in Congress the necessity of giving that consideration to the subject which will restore our flag to its place upon the seas and our nation to that naval pre-eminence to which it is justly en-

"The great importance to our foreign commerce of an able and efficient consular service cannot be overestimated, and no effort should be spared to insure its absolute divorce from the domain of politics and its elevation to that high plane to which it properly belongs, that it might comport with the dignity of our country and with its growing needs and greater on and with its growing needs and greater op-portunities. One other manifest advan-tage which some of the countries of Europe enjoy over us when dealing with other peoples is in their banks in foreign other peoples is in their banks in foreign countries. Those banks not only facilitate transactions greatly, but are of invaluable assistance in making investments, obtaining information, determining credits and making collections. It is well known that those banks yield rich returns, and our bankers and capitalists would do well to expeditly study this beauty of the well to carefully study this branch of the

Why Called at This Time.

"I have been asked repeatedly: Why has this convention been called at this time? How can foreign commerce receive proper country find it difficult to meet the demand for their products; when the output of many factories and mills has been sold months, aye, even a year ahead; when the railroads are overwhelmed by the volume of freight requiring transportation? My reply is, foreign commerce will be the pressing question in the near future; it will be a question affecting the welfare of millions of Americans. The reaping comes long after the sowing, but we must sow if we would reap. Let us sow now, that the harvest may be ready when we shall Temporary Organization Effected. At the conclusion of the chairman's ad dress, temporary organization was ef fected by the selection of Mr. James W Van Cleve of St. Louis, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, as temporary chairman and of Frank S. Gardner of New York as temporary secretary. Mr. Van Cleve appealed to the convention not to permit itself to be stampeded on any issue without mature deliberation and sug-gested that, as business men, the assem-bled delegates should waste no time but bled delegates should waste no time but prepare for active proceedings by effecting immediate permanent organization. On motion, committees of fifteen members each were appointed on credentials and on permanent organization and rules.

Gen. John M. Wilson was the only local member of the committee on credentials and B. H. Warner of the committee on organization and rules.

Adjournment was taken shortly after noon, the chair announcing that the committee reports would be received at 3:20

The Palais Royal

The Editorial Comment of The Sunday Star is Given Below.

THE PALAIS ROYAL announces the opening of the "white sale" of 1907, beginning tomorrow. Lingerie is to be offered at complimentary prices, as souvenirs of the "opening." Today's Palais Royal page is largely given to illustrations. The new features include garments combining two and three pieces, garter drawers gowns with pieces, garter drawers, gowns with Dutch neck and sleeves, fitted hip skirts, corset covers with unusually full blouse fronts, improved garments for the very full figure.

The white wash waists of 1907 are not materially different than the old year's styles, but it will be noticed that frills are being used as trimmings, and that three-quarter sleeves are more in evi-dence—a boon to women whose elbows are not perfection. So elaborate and delicate is the work on some of the new waists that the cost is $15 each.

The illustrations on the Palais Royal page will prove quite a fashion lesson, while the complimentary prices the souvenirs of the "opening," will prompt the loosening of the purse-strings. Embroideries are to be scarce this season, and, once the stocks are picked over, this scarcity will be made very apparent. The statement of the Palais Royal department manager is that not a few of the orders given abroad last Oc-tober still remain unfilled.

The "white sale" also includes wash dress materials, laces, art needlework, handkerchiefs, neckwear, table linens, etc. The "opening" is associated with attractive displays and complimentary prices, so that tomorrow is to be quite a gala day at the Palais Royal.

Note that 10 per cent discount is to be allowed on all Wedding Trousseaux at $10 to $150, on all Hand-made French Lingerie at 95c to $15.98 per garment, all Franco-American Lingerie at $3.50 to $25 per garment, and all extra-size garments at $1 to $10.

CHANGES IN CORONER'S OFFICE. Commissioners Decline to Discuss Mr. Davis' Bill.

The Commissioners announced today that they will not discuss the bill drafted by Mr. Henry E. Davis, providing for radical changes in the methods of conducting the coroner's office of the District as well as the law governing the appointment of the roner, until it has been referred to them by Congress for a report. However, Commissioner Macfarland has expressed himself as being of the opinion that there is no reason for a change in the department no reason for a change in the department in question and that Coroner Nevitt conducted the recent Terra Cotta wreck inquest satisfactorily. Although the other Commissioners would not make a statement, it is believed they are in favor of certain changes in the coroner's department but whether or not such changes are ment. but whether or not such changes are provided in the bill proposed by Mr. Davis they decline to state.

Coroner Nevitt said today he thought the present method is satisfactory. He said the complaint of Mr. Davis is the first of the kind he here heard about his office and the kind he has heard about his office and the manner in which inquests are con-ducted. Dr. Nevitt referred to the similar ducted. Dr. Nevitt referred to the similar investigations that are made by the grand jury, pointing out that at such sessions only one side is heard, and that counsel is not permitted to be present.

The coroner says the investigation of the Terra Cotta wreck was conducted openly, and that everybody was permitted to appear and give testimony who knew anything about the affair. He said he had no comment to make upon the statement of Mr. Davis about the trouble he had about the matter of arranging bail for his clients.
